PEEK HITS ADMINISTRATION

Here and There

Editorial By Alex. H. WASHBURN

THE City of Hope has taken the first step in what will likely be a long and tedious campaign through state commissions and the courts to force down telephone rates. Under the new procedure provided by Arkansas law, however, the people are enabled to meet a great utility corporation on more nearly even terms than ever before. That isn't saying much—but every bit helps regardless.

America Drawn in War to Protect Munition Money

Senate Probe Reveals J. P. Morgan's Conference With the British

NOTE IS WITHHELD

U. S. Department of State Maintained Silence—Was Eve of Election

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Negotiations which found J. P. Morgan sitting down with the British War Council in the interests of American arms factories were revealed Wednesday by the senate munitions committee. The arms companies concerned, it was said, were Winchester and Remington.

Committee investigators disclosed that the State Department, with the 1916 election approaching, withheld from publication for three weeks a British note received in a controversy over British interference with American commerce.

Both Morgan and Thomas W. Lamont testified that important banking interests stood to lose heavily unless rifle contract settlements were satisfactory. On those banks, it was said, they depended for floating a contemplated British loan of $200,000,000.

The rifle contract was among evidence that companies in which Morgan was interested sold the Allies $363,000,000 worth of goods before the United States entered the war. In it, as purchasing agent for the Allies, the Morgan company engineered purchase of 3,000,000,000 of goods for the Allies at a commission of $30,000,000.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Source of a hundred sensational stories to the world-wide secret activities of the war gun merchants, the senate munitions committee returns to its job determined this time to turn up the story of American World War loans.

In the backwash of the committee's astonishing disclosures, congress passed in 1935 temporary neutrality laws that were the broadest the country ever has known. Now, the investigators again become the means of dramatizing the views of those who want rigid neutrality and control of the munitions industry.

Already an inquiry has been made as to how much it would cost the gov-

Other Candidates Appear in State

Cazort for Governor—Gates vs. Thorn for Lieutenant-Governor

LITTLE ROCK—Harvey B. Thorn of Harrisburg, speaker of the House of Representatives, and O. E. Gates, Cleveland county representative, announced Wednesday that they will be candidates for the nomination for lieutenant governor at the Democratic primary next August.

Lieut. Gov. Lee Cazort, serving his second consecutive term, has indicated that he will be a candidate for governor. Senator Sam Levine of Pine Bluff said recently that he probably will announce soon as a candidate for lieutenant governor.

Representative Gates is a vice president of the state O. E. W. organization and has indicated that he will advocate the principles sponsored by that organization. Included in his platform, he said, will be free textbooks, old age pension up to $30 a month, homestead exemptions up to $2,000, and revamping of the state's taxing system to provide "a system of taxation based upon those paying who are able to pay."

He said he will favor a law which "will enable the state to recover back taxes from corporations who have purposely evaded the tax laws through failure to make proper assessments." He reiterated a recent declaration that he is opposed to any appropriation for a centennial celebration.

Football Blanket to Go to Player

Fans Will Be Asked to Help Out on Hope High School's Plans

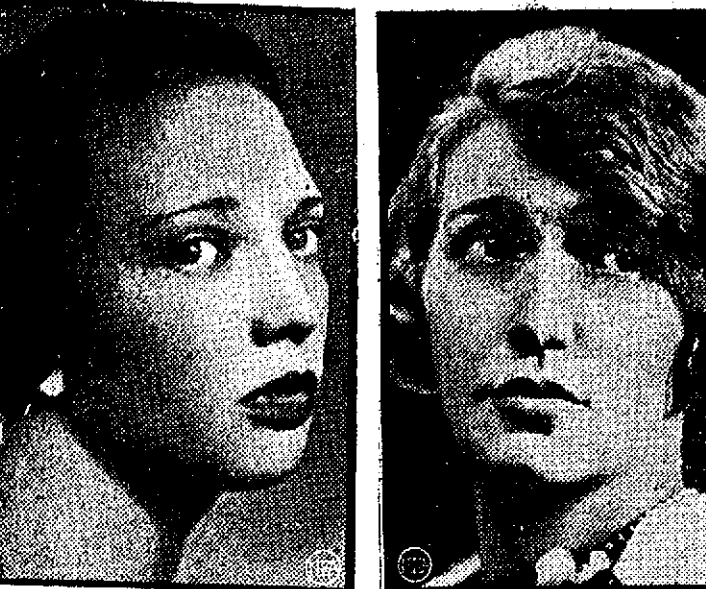

The student council of Hope High School announced Thursday that a large red blanket bearing the word "Bobsate" in the center in big white letters would be awarded to a member of the 1935 Hope High School football team.

Selection of the player receiving the blanket will be determined by students and football fans voting for the individual. The council announced that any person could vote for the sum of 10 cents per vote.

The vote entitles the person to have his or her name stitched on the blanket.

Albert Jewell, president of the council, announced that fans would be given an opportunity to select their player through a canvass to be launched in downtown Hope.

Says Mother Sterilized Her

A sensational fight of daughter against mother, in which Ann Cooper Hewitt, left, 21-year-old heiress, charges she was duped into a sterilization operation so her two-thirds interest in a $2,000,000 fortune would go to her mother if the girl died childless, is forecast in the $500,000 damage suit filed by the girl in San Francisco. The heiress declared she had suffered years of mistreatment from her mother, Mrs. Maryon Brugliere Hewitt D'Erlanger McCarter, right, internationally famed divorcée. But two San Francisco doctors and a psychiatrist, named co-defendants, declared the operation was necessary because of Miss Hewitt's weak mentality. Other medical testimony Wednesday disputed this.

Sane, Contented

Charges Mother Forced Operation to Retain Command of Estate

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(AP)—A battle of alienists appeared in prospect Wednesday night in Ann Cooper Hewitt's $500,000 sterilization suit against her mother, Mrs. Maryon Hewitt McCarter.

A New Jersey physician for a hospital for the insane and a nurse voiced opinions contrary to the mother's contention that the 21-year-old heiress to a fortune estimated as high as $10,000,000 was mentally subnormal and possibly subject to difficulties unless restrained by the surgeon's knife.

Authorities continued investigating legal aspects of the operation by which the girl allegedly was sterilized 11 months before she became of age and began receiving about $1,500 a month income in her own name.

District Attorney Matthew A. Brady reiterated the case doubtless would go before the grand jury.

Both Russell P. Tyler, lawyer for the heiress, and attorneys for Mrs. McCarter said they would produce experts to testify about the girl's mental condition.

Ann was "perfectly normal in all respects during a sanity test last November 7," said Dr. Lawrence A. Collins of the New Jersey State Insane hospital staff. His statement was made in an affidavit on file in Hackensack, where the girl has asked an accounting of her mother's handling of the estate.

"She was no more feeble minded than I am," said Miss Anne B. Lindsay, a nurse who formerly attended the heiress. Miss Lindsay gave her opinion in an affidavit here.

Miss Hewitt charges she was taken to a hospital for an appendectomy and later learned she had been sterilized at her mother's request. The operation was performed in 1934.

She accused the mother of engineering the operation to make certain the girl never would have children to inherit benefits of the trust fund which otherwise would go to Mrs. McCarter.

Dr. Collins said he found Miss Hewitt "quiet, orderly, agreeable and co-operative." He said there was no expression of delusion and she was "correctly orientated in all spheres. Her attention was easily held."

"She spoke and wrote fluently in French. She conversed in Italian and had a fairly extensive reading of Shakespeare, French history of Napoleon Bonaparte and Marie Antoinette, King Lear, Dante's Inferno, Dickens and the psychology of life."

F. D. Speaks at Jackson Day Dinner—Talmadge Is Lone Dissenter

WASHINGTON—(Copyright Associated Press)—The figure of George N. Peek, sworn enemy of some Roosevelt administration policies, entered the chaotic AAA picture Thursday, leading New Dealers to fear another storm of dissension.

Administration men received word that Peek, former Roosevelt adviser who was stripped of his high powers and resigned after clashing with Secretary Hull of the Department of State, planned to communicate his ideas to a conference of 70 farm organization leaders.

"No" From Talmadge

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Democratic National Committee upheld the New Deal Thursday with only one dissenting vote, cast by Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia.

Without debate the meeting adopted a resolution by Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, N. J. Chairman Farley called for discussion but no one arose.

On the vote there were rousing cries and a single, clear, loud "No" from the Georgia critic of the New Deal.

President's Speech

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Renewing an assault on those "left-wing" socialists, President Roosevelt tonight signed the formal opening of the Democratic campaign Wednesday night with an indirect appeal for support from voters of all "political affiliations."

Projecting his voice to hundreds of Jackson Day dinner rallies throughout the country, the president asserted that the most recent language from the Supreme Court would "affect the lives of Americans for years to come."

He concluded his brief reference to the high court's overthrow of the AAA without offering an immediate substitute, but earlier in his address asserted that the "basic issue" of the 1936 campaign will be "the retention of popular government."

Applause all but drowned out his concluding words: "We will not retreat."

A 70-second ovation greeted the president as he rose to speak directly to the nearly 2,000 Democratic leaders and adherents, crowded into a hotel ballroom for dinner at $50 a plate.

Standing beneath a flag-draped portrait of Andrew Jackson, the executive was flanked on the right by Postmaster General Farley and on the left by Bruce Kremer, chairman of the Rules Committee of the 1932 convention, who resigned as committeeman from Montana to practice law here.

Lessons in Law-Making

By the Associated Press

11. Congress and Courts

Perhaps never before in the history of the nation have the relations of congress and the federal courts been so interlocked as they have since adoption of the "new deal" administration.

The control of congress over the federal judiciary is more complete than the average person realizes.

The supreme court itself is to a large extent, under the surveillance of congress, and the very existence of the lower federal courts is the result of direct action of congress.

The constitution provided for the creation of the supreme court and the law establishing it was passed by congress in 1789. The constitution also stipulated that "the congress may from time to time ordain and establish" lesser federal courts could be created.

The last important change in statutory regulation of the supreme court was the judiciary act of 1925 which limits that tribunal's jurisdiction and confines its judgments to constitutional questions and matters of national importance.

Congress is without authority to abolish the supreme court, but it may regulate the number of justices and its most powerful weapon is the senate's right to confirm nominations to the court.

Congress has the authority to remove federal judges by impeachment. The house of representatives votes the articles of impeachment and the offending judge is hailed before the bar of the senate for trial. This has happened eight times. Four judges were removed, one resigned, and four were acquitted.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

First of the vitamins is termed Vitamin A. Follow a fairly good diet, and there's no reason why you should suffer from lack of this element. Eat food that has no vitamin A and you may become subject to the condition called night blindness.

Night blindness results from changes that take place in the eye, which suffer from loss of a substance called visual purple.

Vitamin A is found in large amounts in animal fats, butter, egg yolk, cod liver and halibut liver oil. It has been noticed in green leaves, in alfalfa, cabbage, spinach, and young clover.

The greener the leaves, the better they are as a source of vitamin A. Leaf lettuce is better than head lettuce and spinach and carrot tops also are excellent sources of vitamin A.

Halibut liver oil is the natural substance with the highest concentrate of vitamin A. It is 60 times stronger than cod liver oil in its content of this vitamin.

The percentage of children who do not receive adequate amounts of vitamin A in their diet.

The figures show around 25 per cent in rural areas and as much as 50 per cent in urban areas.

Today's Health Question: Place advice which climate would be best suited to one who had three nose operations for polyps, with another to follow.

Answer: The question of climate for persons who have diseases of nose and throat is impossible to answer in general terms. Certain individuals do better in dry climates, and others in moist. Some feel better at high altitudes and others improve at sea level.

Your own physician, who is familiar with your condition, is in a better position to answer this question than anyone else.

Vitamin: "Animals get their vitamin A from plants or from other animals. The cow eats grass, and the milk of the cow contains vitamin A. Milk and butter made in summer are richer in vitamin A than milk and butter made in winter. In summer the cow has a richer diet of green grass."

In Newfoundland and Labrador, where the people live largely on white bread, dried peas, and salt meat, night blindness is exceedingly common. As the deficiency becomes greater, there develops an actual degeneration of the eye, called xerophthalmia.

The same condition has been seen among coolies in India, China and Japan; in Russia, among the peasants, who undergo long periods of fasting; and in Brazil among negro workers restricted in their diets to beans, pork fat, and cornmeal.

In the United States, investigations have shown that there is some degree of deficiency in some large cities.

A Book a Day: By Bruce Catton

In "The Jew of Rome," Lion Feuchtwanger studies the problem of nationalism versus internationalism as it cropped out in the Rome of Titus and Domitian.

His hero is Josephus, the great Jewish historian; and it is through Josephus' eyes that the conflict is seen, through his mind that its implications are weighed and appraised.

Jerusalem has fallen to Titus and Vespasian, the Temple has been destroyed, the Jews have been scattered. The rising international viewpoint of the Jewish leaders—a viewpoint which had been leading them to a dim conception of the brotherhood, the common interests, of all mankind—is thus abruptly destroyed.

For, since Jerusalem has been sacked, the Jews can maintain their racial consciousness only by making "the Jew" infinitely more rigid and complicated. Scattered over the earth, they must become a closed corporation, a self-centered community. The world viewpoint is no longer possible.

Studying this change, Josephus becomes conscious of an obscure new fact which is rising to voice a new international viewpoint, a sect of Pharisees, or Christians whose leader, Paul, is ignoring racial and national lines. He travels to Galilee to trace the sect's origin, loses them, feels disappointed and resentment—but finds the sect's viewpoint subtly attractive.

All this, of course, takes place beneath the irresistible nationalism of imperial Rome, all-powerful and ruthless. And the author gives us this most fascinating study in a historical novel that is as real and alive as something out of your daily newspaper.

Published by Viking, the book sells for $2.50.

Living Up to Opinion: The truth was that Jay had all the good qualities of the average boy. He was careless, yes, but what boy isn't? He was not much of a student either, but then that is nothing to ring the town-bell about. He wasn't particular whether his cars were washed or not, preferably not, but that is the classic history of all boys.

What happened was that he was cashing in on his parents' convictions about him. Surely one of them was right. And, too, he sensed that everything he did gave each of them a certain satisfaction because it was an excuse for another quarrel.

These influences in a child's life are felt but not actually understood by him. If anyone had ventured to explain to Jay what it was all about he would have been puzzled.

His parents loved him after their fashion, but were inclined to give favor separately. By dividing his allegiance in two, he was working them both.

Left Without Foundation: It is easy to see what followed. By the time Jay was fourteen (the time when most boys begin to realize that you'd better pick yourself up, because people were watching you and it is necessary to try a little harder), there wasn't anything to build on. He had never been encouraged. He was quite sure now that there was nothing in him anyway—nothing good or decent. Years of being the storm-center of daily bickering had left their mark. Openly insulted across the dinner table, the no-man's land of domestic war, any sensitiveness he possessed had hardened long ago.

He did not realize that his parents, of combative dispositions, loved a fight for fight's sake, and if he hadn't been there, would have fussed over a dog or a dollar bill.

Nothing kills ambition or pride in a boy more quickly than this division in home life. He needs "mutual" encouragement, and mutual sympathy. It is always disastrous when parents make a child the target of their distaste for each other.

When Scott spoke in the tone he had just used over the phone, something was bound to happen. It had taken a jolt like this to bring that hard-headed, hard-bitten young realist to his senses, bringing him tearing across the country to put a stop to this fool business.

MEANWHILE Dana continued her preparations in a half daze. There was a sense of unreality about everything. The rain had stopped, but the sky was still dark, and the gloom had penetrated the house, wrapping it in gray shadows.

The silent, flower-filled rooms surely had nothing to do with a happy occasion. Dana could not bear to look into the big, front drawing room. Once she had, but had glanced away quickly. The big mantel facing her was like a solemn rebuke.

She and Scott had stood in front of it two years ago when they gave their pledges to each other, with a soft glow from tall candles about them. Forever and ever. What a mockery! Nobody ever married for forever and ever any more.

Nancy was shut up in her room. Aunt Ellen's blue eyes looked as though they were being perpetually washed with tears. It was easy enough to understand why Aunt Ellen looked unhappy. She believed romance had reality, when really it was only a trap. But why should Nancy who had so much to profit from this marriage withdraw from the plans with such cold hostility?

Her traveling cases were packed. Her traveling outfit was on a hanger. Hat, gloves, the new pocketbook, daintily outlined, were on the bed.

An orchid shoulder bouquet was in the icebox. A big, beautiful one. But not bigger or more beautiful than the one Scott and sent on that other wedding day. She wished Ronnie had sent something else—anything but orchids. But she couldn't have known that orchids were going to make her miserable. Aunt Ellen had almost caught her splashing tears all over Ronnie's orchids.

Nancy would probably smile cynically when she planned them on her shoulder.

It was 6 o'clock now. Just 5. The hours seemed leaden. Not even lighted fires, recklessly blazing all over the house and the prodigious waste of electricity were bringing a cheerful aspect. She would feel differently, perhaps. If Nancy were friendly, if people were chattering all over the place, and if Ronnie were here.

He was so dear and considerate. When she was with him, some of her doubts fell away.

"Dana, dear, Miss Burton has come. Are you ready for the manœuvre?"

Aunt Ellen opened the door gently and put her gray head in. Then she closed the door behind her quickly: "Dana, you're crying!"

"It's a cold, Aunt Ellen."

"I guess I know tears when I see them," Aunt Ellen answered with surprising spirit. Her own tears fell on Dana's bright hair, as she took her niece in her arms.

"Dana, there's something I want to tell you. I—"

But her words were interrupted by Mrs. Cameron and opened the door. "Dana, here is Miss Burton."

Aunt Ellen had whisked a handkerchief from somewhere and dabbed Dana's cheeks quickly, and then her own.

"So this is the little lady who's getting married?" Miss Burton's eyes were fixed, admirably, on Dana. "Ready, dearie?"

"Yes, I'm ready," Dana answered listlessly.

Miss Burton was fussing busily with her paraphernalia, keeping up a constant stream of conversation that scarcely pricked Dana's abstraction.

"Sorry to be late," Miss Burton said, "but I had a hard customer. She wanted a deep red; and then when it was on, decided she wanted pale pink."

"I suppose you do have some trying people," Dana said.

Stitch Saves Chancellor LONDON—(AP)—At the climax of Lord de Clifford's manslaughter trial in the house of lords, England's wiggled lord chancellor had to break the long white rod of office to signify the trial was over.

Lord Halsbury, present chancellor, is a powerful man, and probably would have had little trouble in breaking the wand. But he remembered the denouement of the trial in 1901 of Earl Russell for bigamous marriage with an American girl at Reno, Nev.

On that occasion the diminutive Lord Halsbury struggled desperately with his wand and broke it only after several furious attempts.

Lord Halsbury took precautions. Before the trial, he had his wand saved in half.

With All My Love by Mary Raymond Copyright NEA 1935

BEGIN HERE TODAY DANA STANLEY, divorced from her husband, DR. SCOTT STANLEY, is making plans to marry rich RONALD MOORE.

Ronnie had been in love with Dana before her marriage. After Dana leaves her husband (believing him to be in love with PAULA LONGER, Scott's partner, and tells NANCY, Dana's half-sister, loves Ronnie but has always hidden her feelings from him by a disdainful attitude.

With an heart in her plans, Dana goes ahead with her preparations to marry Ronnie.

AUNT ELLEN, Dana's romantic aunt, goes to DR. SCOTT STANLEY, Scott's partner, and tells him Dana and Ronnie plan to marry that night. The physician decides to telephone the news to Scott, who is attending a convention out of the city.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIV

IT was 2:30 p. m. when the telephone rang and the operator's voice announced: "Ready with Dr. Stanley at Easton."

A pause, then Scott's deep voice: "Hello."

"Hello, there, Dr. Osborne."

Then, quickly, "Nothing wrong, I hope."

"Plenty, I'm afraid, Scott."

"Let's have it, sir."

"They say your wife's getting married to Ronnie Moore—to-night."

Silence. Then Scott's voice, hoarse with emotion. "Thanks, sir. I'm coming as fast as I can."

The telephone clicked. Dr. Osborne hung up, smiling a little. A load was off his mind. He had almost made one of the big mistakes of his life. He would have made it if it hadn't been for that timid old lady. But now Scott was coming as fast as he could. That meant he'd be coming more than fast. The new car of Scott's was a traveler! And with good roads all the way, Scott should have time to get home before nightfall, with a good margin to spare.

When Scott spoke in the tone he had just used over the phone, something was bound to happen. It had taken a jolt like this to bring that hard-headed, hard-bitten young realist to his senses, bringing him tearing across the country to put a stop to this fool business.

She and Scott had stood in front of it two years ago when they gave their pledges to each other, with a soft glow from tall candles about them. Forever and ever. What a mockery! Nobody ever married for forever and ever any more.

Nancy was shut up in her room. Aunt Ellen's blue eyes looked as though they were being perpetually washed with tears. It was easy enough to understand why Aunt Ellen looked unhappy. She believed romance had reality, when really it was only a trap. But why should Nancy who had so much to profit from this marriage withdraw from the plans with such cold hostility?

Her traveling cases were packed. Her traveling outfit was on a hanger. Hat, gloves, the new pocketbook, daintily outlined, were on the bed.

An orchid shoulder bouquet was in the icebox. A big, beautiful one. But not bigger or more beautiful than the one Scott and sent on that other wedding day. She wished Ronnie had sent something else—anything but orchids. But she couldn't have known that orchids were going to make her miserable. Aunt Ellen had almost caught her splashing tears all over Ronnie's orchids.

Nancy would probably smile cynically when she planned them on her shoulder.

It was 6 o'clock now. Just 5. The hours seemed leaden. Not even lighted fires, recklessly blazing all over the house and the prodigious waste of electricity were bringing a cheerful aspect. She would feel differently, perhaps. If Nancy were friendly, if people were chattering all over the place, and if Ronnie were here.

He was so dear and considerate. When she was with him, some of her doubts fell away.

"Dana, dear, Miss Burton has come. Are you ready for the manœuvre?"

Aunt Ellen opened the door gently and put her gray head in. Then she closed the door behind her quickly: "Dana, you're crying!"

"It's a cold, Aunt Ellen."

"I guess I know tears when I see them," Aunt Ellen answered with surprising spirit. Her own tears fell on Dana's bright hair, as she took her niece in her arms.

"Dana, there's something I want to tell you. I—"

But her words were interrupted by Mrs. Cameron and opened the door. "Dana, here is Miss Burton."

Aunt Ellen had whisked a handkerchief from somewhere and dabbed Dana's cheeks quickly, and then her own.

"So this is the little lady who's getting married?" Miss Burton's eyes were fixed, admirably, on Dana. "Ready, dearie?"

"Yes, I'm ready," Dana answered listlessly.

Miss Burton was fussing busily with her paraphernalia, keeping up a constant stream of conversation that scarcely pricked Dana's abstraction.

"Sorry to be late," Miss Burton said, "but I had a hard customer. She wanted a deep red; and then when it was on, decided she wanted pale pink."

"I suppose you do have some trying people," Dana said.

Six to 15 Parties Loom Up for 1936

"Ham" Lewis' Prediction May Not Be as Funny as It Appears

By BYRON PRICE

Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington.

However skeptical may be their remarks for publication, practical politicians have found much food for thought in the prediction of Senator James Hamilton Lewis that six presidential tickets may play significant parts in the campaign of 1936.

Senator Lewis is an old-timer at the game of politics. He has had many varied experiences at watching the fall of the cards, and the break of the play. His suggestions sometimes are tinged with that exotic originality which is so much a part of his individuality, yet they never fail to be interesting.

The senator says he would not be surprised if there were two Democratic tickets and two Republican tickets in the field, and he expects considerable prominence to attach also to the Socialist and the Prohibition tickets.

Such a situation might appear at first glance the dream of someone who had eaten too much Christmas candy. Yet, by one method of reasoning it is possible to conclude that, if anything, Senator Lewis may have understated the case.

Irreconcilable Elements In no recent campaign have there been so many diverse and seemingly irreconcilable political elements struggling for a place in the sun. If each realized its aspirations of establishing itself as a national party, there would be more party labels in America than in England or France.

At least seven of these groups are reputed by their leaders, and by some others, to number their adherents in millions:

The Democrats who are content to follow Mr. Roosevelt.

The northern Democrats who, under the current leadership of Alfred E. Smith, are dissatisfied with Mr. Roosevelt.

The southern Democrats who are in revolt against Mr. Roosevelt, and many of whom refused in 1928 to support Mr. Smith, now in process of organization under the lead of Governor Tamm of Georgia.

The Republicans who favor a direct, right-wing opposition to Mr. Roosevelt, as represented by the protestations of Herbert Hoover.

The Republicans who repudiate both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hoover, and are gathering together to support Senator Borah.

The Democrats and Republicans who believe that the only salvation of the country is adoption of the old-age pension plan of Dr. Townsend.

The Democrats and Republicans who can see no salvation except in the political precepts of Father Coughlin.

The seven groups thus enumerated do not include the Socialists who polled nearly a million votes in 1932; the Prohibitionists, now reorganizing with a new zeal for the repeal of repeal; the Farmer-Labor party, which controls Minnesota; the Progressive party which controls Wisconsin; nor the Communist, Social-Labor, Liberty, and National parties, all of which entered tickets in the election of 1932.

Altogether, here are 15 groups—all strong enough to attract some sort of national attention, most of them strong enough to set up comprehensive national organizations if they choose.

Further Divisions When the list is reviewed, furthermore, one striking thing about it is the fixed character of the lines which divide one group from another.

Can the Republicans hope for any amicable working arrangements in 1936 between the adherents of Mr. Hoover and the adherents of Mr. Borah, now that both of these leaders have come out into the open with their opposing views about party reorganization?

Will Dr. Townsend or Father Coughlin find it possible, in consistent development of the principles to which each is strongly committed, to support any Democratic, Republican, Socialist or other candidate who does not agree with them?

One Jew Thinks All BERLIN—(AP)—The new law prohibiting employment in Jewish households of Aryan housemaids who are less than 35 years old has caused considerable perplexity among the housemaids.

In order to remove misunderstandings the ministry of the interior has found it necessary to define exactly what is a Jewish household.

The household cannot be considered Jewish if only the women and children are Jewish, state the official explanation. If at least one adult male member of the household is a Jew, however, then the household is Jewish and the Aryan housemaid must show she is at least 35 years old or look for another job.

Between 1905 and 1912, approximately 300,000 elephants were killed annually in Africa.

We are all, men and women, poor worms crawling up from the dampness and darkness of clay. To break in the sunlight and warmth of the day. Some climb to a leaf and reflect its bright sheen. Some toil through the grass, and are crushed there unseen. Some sting if you touch them, and some evolve wings. They came from the Source—to the Source they go back. The sinners are those who have missed the track. We cannot judge women or men as a class. Each soul has its own distinct place in the mass.—E. W. W.

The Friday Music club will meet Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Edwin Stewart, North Hervey street, with Mrs. S. C. Newton as joint hostess. The club meets promptly at 2 o'clock followed by the study, "Nationalism in France," led by Mrs. Wilbur Jones followed by program.

The Paisley P. T. A. held its January meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the Paisley school with 33 members responding to the roll call. The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. H. O. Kyles, The Rev. Dan Rosoff, introduced by Mrs. Edwin Dossett, gave a most interesting and helpful devotional. The president's message was discussed by Mrs. Hatley

White and a talk on "Home Play and Recreation" was given by Mrs. E. F. McFadden. In the count of mothers present, the majority registered from Miss Helen Betts' room. Following the meeting delicious refreshments were served.

In the private dining room of Hotel Barlow, the January meeting of the John C. chapter D. A. R. was held with a beautifully appointed luncheon at 1 o'clock Wednesday, with Mrs. Dan Green and Misses Mary Carrigan and Mary Jones as hostesses. Following the impressive ritual led by the regent, Miss Mamie Twitcheil, the members and special guests were all seated around one large table. The chapter color scheme was beautifully developed in the central decoration, a massive bowl of a charming arrangement of tall, slender roses, and delicate sprays of heather, fringed with graceful maiden hair fern. The attractive place cards symbolized the New Year. During the serving of the tempting four course luncheon, Mrs. J. M. Houston presented a combined program on patriotic music and "The American Spirit" opening with "Sylvia" and "The Rosary" sung by Miss Evelyn Murphy, with Mrs. R. T. White accompanying. Patriotic music was further stressed in a very forceful paper by Mrs. J. M. Wellborn, director of the Hope Choral club. Mrs. R. T. White read a very interesting article on the "American Spirit as Stressed in Education." The program closed with a discussion on "Stressing Patriotism and Learning About America First," in our schools by Mrs. Sid Henry. Guests introduced for this very delightful occasion were: Mrs. W. T. Woodruff of Pine Bluff, Mrs. Lena McClung of Little Rock, Mrs. Jack Stewart of Vicksburg, Miss, Mrs. T. S. McQuinn, Mrs. Stanley White, Mrs. A. K. Holloway, Mrs. J. T. West, Miss Evelyn Murphy, Dr. E. C. Champlin, Mrs. John Wellborn and Mrs. Sid Henry. Following the luncheon, the meeting was called to order by the regent, Miss Mamie Twitcheil and the regular routine of business was dispatched. Mrs. Woodruff, state chairman of the filing and lending committee, favored the meeting with a very interesting talk on her work, expressing her pleasure as a guest among old friends. The meeting adjourned with the closing chapter ritual.

Dixieland's Dixie Lands Success in Hollywood

You might pardon her southern accent, but you can't overlook that disturbingly handsome Dixie Dunbar, vivacious Atlanta, relaxes positively during the task of carving a film career. Still in her teens, and with Broadway success behind her, Dixie's rapidly becoming a film star of the first magnitude. Because she nearly stole the picture in a dancing and dramatic role in an upcoming production, Dixie's option has been taken up and her film success seems certain.

Two Statues Near Completion at Mt. Rushmore

Flecked with snow like the hair of men in the winter of life, the likenesses of George Washington (left) and Thomas Jefferson gaze from the lofty eminence of the colossal Mt. Rushmore memorial across the far-flung Dakota horizon. The last few months of work by Gutzon Borglum, noted sculptor, and his staff of stone cutters, nearly completed the two statues, largest in the world, which have required the removal of nearly 500,000 tons of granite. Operations have been suspended during cold weather, and several more years will be required to carve the portraits of Lincoln and Roosevelt.

That arms manufacturers knew as early as 1908—six years before the World war—a great conflict was brewing. That the United States government assigned delivery on some of its munitions contracts to the British navy from 1914 to 1916. That munitions men made profits as high as 362 per cent during the World war.

The inquiry brought forth secrets long guarded, and at one time committee investigators charged certain government departments with blocking them by withholding material information.

A great deal of what was told the inquiry subsequently was denied by the principals involved; munitions struck out sharply against government manufacture of war weapons on the ground it could not be as efficient as private operations.

Advocating Large Armies
Chairman Nye of the committee reached the belief, he said, that some American munitions interests were co-operating with foreign companies to increase their profits through advocating large armies and navies. Among the many accusations put forward either through witnesses, matter dug up by committee investigators, or upon the statements of senators were those:

That a son of the late French premier Clemenceau was listed as a former agent in Europe of an English munitions firm. That Sir Basil Zaharoff, "mystery man" of Europe, got commissions from an American concern which had agreed with a British company to split the world's submarine building business.

The World War German U-boats were built on an American-owned patent. That a submarine salesman seriously attempted to attend the 1925 disarmament conference as a delegate.

That an American ambassador and other high government officials in 1922 helped an American submarine company to sell its wares in South America. That one company was successful in fomenting national animosities to sell munitions.

That an American naval cruiser was sent abroad as a "show case" to help a private firm sell its boats. That the United States war and navy departments were at one time "co-

Store-Door Service by the Railroads

Pickup and Delivery to Be Free on Western Lines After January 20

ST. LOUIS—Store-door to store-door, free pick-up and delivery of package freight will be inaugurated January 20 by mid-western and south-western railroads it was announced Thursday. This class of traffic known in railroad and shipping circles as L. C. 1. (meaning less than car lots) has been receiving serious attention of western and southwestern rail lines for five years. The free pick-up and delivery has been in effect in some sections with certain limitations for some time.

The new plan, which it is said will effect savings running into millions of dollars for shippers, and which it is expected will materially increase the tonnage of package shipments handled by railroads, has received the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission and official instructions will be issued to all interested and affected carriers in a few days. The instruction circular, issued yesterday by the Missouri Pacific, over the signature of J. A. Brown, assistant chief traffic officer, says, in part:

"Effective with January 20 free pick up and delivery service will be accorded on all less than car load traffic on the Missouri Pacific Lines. These lines will furnish free pick up and delivery service, as the case may be, on all less than car load traffic, regardless of origin or destination of the same."

Originally, as the plan was worked out and agreed to by eleven southwestern railroads, this privilege was limited to shipments originating and delivered within a radius of 300 miles. This, naturally resulted in great confusion.

The circular or instructions signed by Mr. Brown and sent to all Missouri Pacific representatives, continues:

"Allowance of 5 cents per hundred pounds will be made to shipper or consignee at points on the Missouri Pacific Lines where the service of pick up or delivery is now furnished by shipper or consignee, in lieu of the free service outlined above."

"At stations on other lines located in the state of Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana (on and west of the Mississippi river) and Texas, and also it will apply in portions of the states of New Mexico, Indiana, Utah and Montana, free pick up and delivery service including allowance to shippers and consignees also will be granted."

"All L. C. 1. traffic originating in the aforementioned territory and destined to points outside this territory will be accorded the free pick up service or the 5 cents per 100 pounds allowance, and all traffic originating in other territory and destined to points within the above described region will be accorded the free delivery service or the 5 cents per 100 pounds allowance."

Mr. Brown said Missouri Pacific officials estimate this new arrangement should nearly double the volume of this class of traffic which has been averaging about $8,000,000 a year on the Missouri Pacific Lines. It is understood that all railroads within the described area are parties to the new agreement, and a few of the railroads in other territories have tariffs which will apply.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

BUILDER OF FRANCE'S EMPIRE

JOSEPH SIMON GALLIENI probably will be remembered most as the man who, early in the World War, rushed his soldiers in Parisian taxicabs to the Marne, to stop the advancing Germans.

But more lasting in history will be General Gallieni's work in Africa, where he extended French dominion and made profitable possessions out of such obscure colonies as Madagascar, and Martinique in the West Indies.

Born in 1849, and a veteran of the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71, he did his greatest work as France's colonizer, explorer, and foreign military commander from 1877 to 1905. His bold stroke at the Marne is credited with turning the tide against the Germans, but when his plans for a more centralized direction of the World War were overruled, he resigned early in 1916. He died that May.

As a tribute for Gallieni's constructive administration of Madagascar, France issued a stamp for that colony in 1931. It is shown here.

Townsend Plan's Chances Are Hurt

AAA Decision Points to Unconstitutionality of Other Scheme

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Dr. F. E. Townsend, sponsor of the $200-a-month pension proposal for persons over 60, disputed Wednesday contentions that the supreme court decision Monday showed his plan was unconstitutional.

Democratic and Republican leaders were inclined to believe that the abolition of AAA would affect the Townsend move in the farming areas. It was said that questions affecting the farmer's income at once would encourage alignments different from those over old age pensions.

Most of the senators and representatives are trying to ascertain popular sentiment toward the Townsend plan before they commit themselves on it. The Townsend National Weekly's statement that the plan has 39 supporters in the house has brought thousands of letters to members of Congress.

Representative Hildebrandt, Democrat, South Dakota, protested Wednesday that his name had not been included. He said he had checked up sentiment in his district and "after careful consideration," decided to support the plan.

Representative Focht, Republican, Pennsylvania, objected to being listed in favor. He advocated old age pensions; but said, "I am afraid Dr. Townsend is oversteering the horse and to commit myself before the plan is presented in definite form would be rank folly."

The amount of the "county turnback" from state gasoline taxation—1/2 cent of the 6 1/2-cent tax—for the last quarter of 1935 was $107,669.34, and checks will be mailed out to county treasurers early next week, State Treasurer Earl Page announced at Little Rock Wednesday.

Checks to southwest Arkansas counties will be as follows: Hempstead $2,461.72; Howard $1,571.51; LaFayette $1,245.84; Nevada $1,727.00.

letters, or other valuable historic records, which, if properly appraised, might find their way into a local library where all would have the opportunity to examine them. Recently, one of our workers found, in a bank vault, a historically valuable letter, written by Abraham Lincoln. The owner did not know what to do with it so, in protecting it, he put it where no one could see it.

This appeal is being made to citizens of the following counties: Miller, Hempstead, Pike, LaFayette, Nevada, Little River, Howard and Sevier, comprising the Texarkana District, for such objects as old records they may possess, and other facts of community value. We trust that you will place in our hands, for temporary safe keeping, any descriptions of manuscripts that we may incorporate in the American Guide Book, the government's new five volume guide to the United States, soon to be published. Our only hope of getting a true and adequate picture of this community before the public, in the American Guide Book, is to be realized through real co-operation from pioneer and other interested local citizens. They can do this by furnishing exclusive special stories about any person, incident, or place of unusual interest. Contact the Supervisor, and he will send a writer to record the facts of the story.

And all communications should be addressed to J. E. Matlock, Local District Supervisor of the Federal Writers' Project, Room No. 408, Post Office Building, Texarkana, Ark.

Black-Draught's Good Reputation

The confidence people have in Black-Draught, built up from satisfactory use so many years, is shown in its being handed on from one generation to another. It must be good to have such a strong following.

Here is a typical reference to Black-Draught by a satisfied user: "We have used Black-Draught for twenty years," writes Mrs. Fred Richardson, of Harborsburg, Okla. "My mother has used it for fifty years. It is the best medicine I know anything about. I take it for sour stomach and constipation, or when I feel sluggish and bad. Black-Draught is splendid to regulate the bowels, cleansing them of waste matter, ridding them of constipation. I expect to use it twenty-five more years if I live and it gives satisfaction as it has always given."

Rare Photo Reveals Beauty of Holy City's Gateway

In a setting of breath-taking beauty stands the gateway to Lhasa, a portal through which fewer than a dozen white men have passed into the holy city of forbidding, brooding mystery, in Tibet, land of the lamas. Under an azure sky, with towering mountains rolling up behind, the towers of the gateway are reflected in the placid water below. BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By Rodney Dutcher

WASHINGTON.—Probably you missed the U. S. Supreme Court's decision in the case of Colgate vs. Harvey the other day. But lawyers who do business before the court believe the verdict may prove as significant as any the justices have handed down in years.

This case didn't involve any New Deal legislation. It concerned the right of the state of Vermont to exempt from the state's income tax such interest as is received from loans made within the state.

The background was a problem which long has afflicted the New England states—export of capital to New York and other sections. Wealth produced by New England industrialists and New England workers has been skimmed off in large gobs and invested in other fields which seemed more profitable, instead of being plowed back into New England enterprise.

After investigation and recommendation by two legislative committees, Vermont decided to do something about it. The tax exemption was designed to encourage investments in Vermont.

But one of its residents, James C. Colgate, sued to have that exemption declared invalid. Colgate is a New York broker with large New York investments.

Held Basic Law Violation

By a vote of six to three the supreme court held that the exemption violated the Constitution. To do that it dragged out an almost forgotten provision of the Constitution—the part of the 14th amendment which says, "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

The amendment itself was framed to protect legal and political rights of negroes in the south and its "due process" clause has since been used chiefly to kill social legislation. But this was the first time the court ever discovered that a state law violated the "privileges and immunities" clause.

The court had hitherto been so zealous in guarding states' rights that most lawyers were amazed to hear Justice Sutherland declare that "As citizens of the United States, we are members of a single great community consisting of all states united, and not of distinct communities consisting of the states severally."

First Time, Says Stone

Justice Stone, speaking also for Cardozo and Brandeis, pointed out that "Since the adoption of the 14th amendment, at least 44 cases have been brought to this court in which state statutes have been assailed as infringements of the privileges and immunities clause. Until today none has held that state legislation infringed upon that clause."

Anyone who knows anything about the rows the justices have among themselves in discussing forthcoming decisions among the three dissenting justices grew hot under their judicial collars in debating the Vermont case.

Some juridical experts suggest that the decision indicates a tendency of the court's majority to protect investors at all costs, even to the point of denying states the right to look after their own economic well-being.

On the other hand, since that may be merely speculation, it can said more definitely than ever that the precedents of the supreme court are only vague guides to its future decisions.

In the Vermont case the court virtually forgot about precedent and indicated its willingness to interpret the Constitution in accordance with its daughter Mrs. John James in Hope. Miss Mabel Bearden, who developed a case of pneumonia last week is reported rapidly recovering.

Mr. and Mrs. Barto Bearden and Mrs. Emma Bearden of Rocky Mount were Monday guests of J. E. Bearden and family.

Mrs. Williams read a very practical and far reaching article on the "New Year" which will challenge us to do greater service for our Master this year.

Gag Man Has Sure Job in Hollywood

He "Spots" the Laughs—and the Movies Need Him Constantly

By ROBBIN COONS
Associated Press Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD—The "gag man" is among the more nearly permanent institutions of an industry that is by nature ephemeral.

His name may change as the years go by, but his job never.

The job is to spot "laughs" in the movies, and it is a sad job because few things are more difficult than to inject the comedy note at just the proper place and time. That is why gag men are, as a lot of serious when they work. After hours, maybe, they will amuse themselves with wisecracks and meriment, but on the set they tackle the job with studios, often solemn mien.

Gag men work with the more serious (or dramatic) writers and watch for potential comedy. Sometimes it becomes their important duty to save an intended serious scene from the treacherous borderline of comedy. Often audiences will laugh at the wrong place in a picture. An alert gag man could have prevented that.

He Haunts the Set

Memory and the "comedy mind" combine to inspire ideas for funny moments in pictures, although some of the gagsters have adopted a card index system for jokes. A particular situation is covered by any number of standard jokes—take an old joke, give it a new twist, and it's good without the new twist.

The serious writer leaves his approved script with the director and the job is done, but the gag man haunts the set constantly during filming. He seeks inspiration from sets and "props" and spontaneous happenings on the set. Bobby Vernon, who used to be a comedy star, helped W. C. Fields get a laugh in "Mississippi," for instance when he suggested the cigar-and-steering-wheel routine. Fields would tilt his cigar so as to miss the spokes of the river boat wheel he was guiding. The inspiration came from Vernon's first sight of the big wheel.

Never Bets His Beer

A "running gag" is the dream of every gag man. This is a gag that, by repetition at intervals through the picture, gets funnier all the time. For instance: Willie Howard in "Rose of the Rancho" is shown in a frontier saloon trying to buy a glass of beer. Recurrently he repeats the effort, but never gets his drink. Something always happens to prevent.

Gag men, of course, are listed on the studio roster as writers, and many of them are good writers. Bobby Vernon and Glenn Tryon are among the few former actors in the gag man's business. Tryon recently became a director, and that is Vernon's aim also.

The most famous of "gag men," by and large, is Dorothy Parker.

Soil Conservation Creates Bird Haven

FULLMAN, Wash. —(AP)— Uncle Sam's soil conservation work in the Palouse hills of southeastern Washington and neighboring Idaho is providing a new haven for Chinese pheasants and Hungarian partridges while saving the top-soil.

Besides checking erosion, providing pasture from otherwise unprofitable land and replenishing the nitrogen in the soil, the areas furnish excellent cover and feed for the popular game birds.

Burbank produced the Shasta daisy by crossing daisies from Japan, England, and America.

Moving picture houses in St. Catharines, Ont., accept stalling and crowd legs in payment for tickets.

Cables Now Spanning Golden Gate

A picture of striking beauty, as well as one of great public utility, is this, of the bridge and the cables supporting it across the Golden Gate, San Francisco's famed waterway, as the job of spinning more than 80,000 miles of wire goes steadily on. This view from the San Francisco tower looks across to the Marin county shore.

9-Day Trip by Sedan Chair Is Cut to 2 Hours With an Airplane

CHUNGKING, China —(AP)— Missionary children who in former years spent nine days reaching the missionary school at Chengtu by primitive transportation now make the trip in two hours. Chengtu is the site of the only large missionary school in Szechuan province. American, Canadian and English children living here formerly made a 300-mile journey by sedan chair to reach the school at the beginning of each term. Often they were delayed by bandits.

With recent inauguration of airplane service between Chungking and Chengtu nearly all the children now travel to boarding school by air. The cost is about the same as by chair.

Broken Pieces: A Leper Story

The following article was mailed to The Star from Soochun, Korea, by Dr. R. M. Wilson, son of J. S. Wilson of Columbus. Dr. Wilson, one of the noted leper specialists of the Orient, and came from his home county of Hempstead for many years, is medical superintendent of the Biederwolf Leper Colony, the American Mission to Lepers, Soochun, Korea, under supervision of the Presbyterian church. Dr. Wilson will return home on a visit during 1936.

By R. M. WILSON, M. D.

I would like to tell the children about a boy in our Leper Colony. The disease had amputated every one of his fingers, leaving two stubs and two thumbs. Now that would terribly handicap most people but it does not seem to worry him the least as he goes about busy as a bee and as happy as a lark.

His joy is to repair all broken dishes: crockery, pots and such. His mixture for repair is a secret, though he has promised to tell me the secret before he passes on to his reward. He used burnt rubber, some resins and a few other things. I usually take my guests to see his work and one day he said, "This repaired pot will be good for years to come and these dishes as good as new."

Where there are 730 lepers with all forms of crippling hands and fingerless stubs there will be a lot of dropping of dishes and breaking of china. So he keeps busy and the thing I like is that he is so happy at his job—even with all his fingers gone. Some well and healthy people will fret their lives away from some little trouble on their face. Suppose you were like Anne here with every finger gone, all her toes and one foot gone. She has been with us for 12 years and always the same, never any worse. When Anne eats her rice her spoon must be tied to her fingerless hand stub, yet she is always cheerful and happy.

People often tell me that I have a terrible job caring for lepers. Yes, many of them come to use as sad, broken pieces of humanity, thrown out by family and village and no longer desired. A boy was discharged from the colony but returned after a few months saying, "My villages would not allow me to drink from our well or walk in the village path; my father told me that my presence there would mean that my sister and brother couldn't even marry; so they threw me out again and I have come back to you." As you know people often throw away old broken dishes, buckets and the like which are hauled away to the rubbish heap. Well, that's about the way with many lepers they are driven away to gather at beggar camps and rubbish heaps.

A vulcanizer can often take an old tire and make it over into a pretty good tire. Well, we take these outcast lepers and make them into happy, busy Christian citizens. With us the repair outfit is no secret and we rejoice to tell just what goes into the repair outfit.

The old heathen Chinese idea was to keep all prescription, doctors' concoctions and the like a secret, and only his own son to be told, and the profits held for the family only. Not so with the true Christ ideas—they are to be told and spread abroad.

Yes, we have faces like a flat tire, where one can neither laugh nor cry nor give expression of any sort where the tears drain constantly over the face. Twenty-eight per cent of our cases show this facial paralysis and if treatment is started late, no recovery from this deformity can be expected. This facial paralysis causes the shrinking of the fat and muscles of the face and often results in one taking on the appearance of a corpse. I believe this is the thing that has made leprosy the most dreaded of all diseases, for it makes one look like a dead man walking about.

In 1930 "Insoung" came to us with his little sister and the terrible deformity of the disease had given them the appearance of old people 60 or 70 years of age. The sister died but "Insoung" recovered and today is a fine man. He is my best doctor and he gives his time prescribing and diagnosing other lepers' troubles. He has written about 4,000 prescriptions in a year. He is president of the C. E. also, and one of our best leaders.

Some doctors will give you the horse-lap when you speak of "curing" a leper, yet we are curing hundreds. It's the greatest joy in the world to take the broken, outcast pieces and see them made over into "ladies and gentlemen."

A more dreadful thing than leprosy

Turkey Call So Good He Goes to Hospital

BRISTOL, Fla.—(AP)—Because Bill Rankin could mimic the turkey's call so well, his hunting trip ended at a hospital.

He was hunting with Albert Evans. They parted, Rankin concealing himself in a clump of bushes and calling to lure some of the birds.

Evans fired in the direction of the call.
